DESCRIPTION

The Plough is a traditional stone terraced Cotswold pub situated in the highly desirable Oxfordshire town of Witney. Witney boasts all the benefits of sitting on the River Windrush on the southern edge of the Cotswolds, some 12 miles West of Oxford. Witney is a thriving market town with around 27,000 residents in over 10,000 households making it the largest town in West Oxfordshire, with a unique blend of history, culture and shopping it's a great destination for visitors and a wonderful place to live. The pub itself is located minutes from the high street which is home to trendy cafés, restaurants and bars along with a variety of boutique shops. The famous Blenheim Palace is less than 10 miles away in the nearby market town of Woodstock.

Pub Layout

The Plough is Witney's oldest pub, full of charm and character. Behind its modest frontage lies a surprisingly spacious interior, featuring a cosy traditional bar with a central open fire and a mix of fixed and loose seating. Toward the rear, you'll find a fully equipped kitchen, customer toilets, and access to a beautifully landscaped riverside garden with decking, quality furniture, and an outdoor bar—perfect for summer trade. The pub also includes a characterful function room with stone walls, low beams, and space for up to 50 guests, making it ideal for private events.

TRADING STYLE

The pub offers a premium experience, serving a quality selection of premium beers and well-kept cask ales. It has an established food trade with potential to expand and increase covers. A key highlight is the riverside garden, which becomes a standout feature during the summer months, attracting strong seasonal trade. Additionally, the upper-level function room provides a flexible space for small private events and meetings, adding to the venue's overall appeal and versatility.
